GMA critics write letter to Obama

By TJ Burgeon

WHEN PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo meets with US President Barack Obama at the White House on Thursday—Friday in Manila—her opponents back home will be hoping that it will result in a change they can believe in.

Ms. Arroyo left for Washington on Wednesday afternoon for her much-anticipated meeting with the newly elected US president and a call by a civil society group on Obama to tell her that she should comply with democratic principles and adhere to human rights.

In an open letter to Obama that was published yesterday in national newspapers as paid ads, the group, led by former Vice President Teodoro Guingona and one-termed President Jovito Salonga, said that upon Obama's assumption of the US presidency, Filipinos "rejoiced at the audacious hope" that he had inspired.

GOODBYE...AGAIN President Arroyo with husband Milan Arroyo is off to meet with US President Obama for the first time since he assumed office last January. Ms. Arroyo, who has arranged twice before to invite a great-west encounter with the first black American president, is the first Asian leader invited to visit with Obama. In her absence, she designates Vice President Noli de Castro as caretaker.

Cory stable; more healing Masses, accolades for icon

By Christine O. Amalilio

THE CONDITION OF FORMER PRESIDENT Corason Aquino has improved but her son, Ben, Sergio "Noytoy" Aquino III, conceded that only God knew how long she would remain stable.

The senator said his mother's blood pressure was "a lot better than previ-

"Well she is stable for a very long time! I think only God will know," he told reporters at the Shrine.

"I would like to emphasize that this is Cory's condition,"

How Cory made her graceful exit

By Franklin M. Delos

DURING THE LAST YEAR OF CORY Aquino's presidency, people close to her floated the possibility of retiring her term. They argued that since she came to power as a "revolutionary president," she was, therefore, eligible to run for another six-year term.

Wherever the idea was mentioned in her presence, however, Cory would simply look out of the window to the right of her desk, ignoring the suggestion.

As her last executive secretary, I witnessed this scene several times, and it is this memory that comes to mind today as I contemplate the difference between that presidency and the present one.

How Cory made her graceful exit with leadership

In her 16 years in office, Cory faced many new challenges from top of the country's leaders. As she stepped down, she left the task of rebuilding a democracy to successors—drafting a new Constitution, resolving ethnic conflicts, and ensuring peace with rebels and communists.

Most significant task

To Cory, however, the last and perhaps most significant task was to ensure the peaceful and orderly transfer of power to the next administration. This was the last year to be contested not through democracy but by force.

Cory left no room for ambiguity. She said that she was more than 90 percent sure that the 2010 election would be the last time that the incumbent would be re-elected.

Red and Blue books

Another interesting output of the transition team was a "red book" and a "blue book." The red book was a list of all public and government-owned assets.

400-year-old church gets makeover

By Gerald G. Guevarra
 Santa Cruz, Marikina

FOUR CENTURIES ago, it was just a simple, structure-made of bamboo, wood and leaves of pine and cane. Now, the Santa Cruz (Holy Cross) Church is a gorgeous showcase of brick and adobe in the heart of bustling Santa Cruz, the largest town in Marikina.

Churchgoers and visitors are amazed with the makeover, initiated by the parish priest and devotees in 2008 as part of the celebration of 400 years of evangelization in Santa Cruz this year.

"The Christian missionaries pursued local evangelization in step with developing and building churches as centers of their missionary work, not content with laying out the town plan," local historian (Gerald Guevarra) says.

The churches "served the heart" of the towns, according to him, becoming "rich sources of information about the promoter and our people's history." Thus, he adds, are the "signs of their presence and 'we must make them greater still'."

Among oldest structures

The Santa Cruz Church is one of the oldest religious structures on the island, predating, even as a fact before the post and the present. Its architecture has a touch of the Renaissance, European-style, according to him. It is the only stone building, "Marikina: The Heart of the Philippines," according to him.

THE "IMPRESSO" Santa Cruz (Holy Cross) Church, one of the oldest churches in Marikina.

THE ALTAR, repaired and moved to its grandeur.

say the church conforms to a visual form, with the long-bell-tower and prominent facade.

from the covered walkway to the altar at the opposite end.

Perhaps, he says, the locals believed in the church's structure to make it more visible to the town's people. Hence, the designers opted for the structure made of the heaviest, lasting toward the town's east entrance (the main entrance is longer and wider than the Greek cross structure of the main altar).

Fr. Arvin Guevarra, the parish priest, clarifies that no renovations were made on the church. "We simply made improvements on the existing work of the church. We are aware that we have to preserve the integrity of this historical structure," he says.

Historical and cultural conservationists have sometimes claimed that some people, in an unnecessary drive to improve a structure's "aesthetic appeal," do more harm than good. They could make "small but irreversible" changes that through the years, may completely change the mission and spirit of the structures, and everything they represent.

Nevertheless, early churchgoers and local cultural significance that they (old churches) provide. They shaped our identity. The churches are part of the town's history, in creating their world with the passing of years," according to him.

P-M budget

According to Subel Guevarra, about 24 million was spent for the improvement of the Santa Cruz Church. The donated funds came from a campaign, launched by the priest and the Parish Pastoral Council among residents, including those who have moved abroad, and other donors and patrons.

Today, the church serves as a place for religious activities.

On the ceiling of the sanctuary and dome are scenes from the passion of Christ, painted painstakingly in pencil by artists from Marikina. At the center is a dove, symbolizing the Holy Spirit, surrounded by angels descending to earth from heaven.

The dome, Ordoño's masterpiece, depicts the meeting of man and God.

"Resurrection" or altar have been repaired and fixed with gold leaf or gold stencils to bring back their grandeur and highlight the iconic figures and compositions of saints and biblical personalities, figures from Bible, according to him, were used to promote the longevity of the altar.

"Gold leaf" also adorns the completed project, with an estimated cost of 10 pesos.

All benefited have been repaired.

A new set of anticonformal equipment and speakers has been installed. Ten educational television cameras and three TV sets in certain spots inside the church and on the parish provide full view of the officiating priest.

Outside are concrete and landscaped grounds. The old entrance was replaced with one fitted with modern amenities.

Quadracentennial

On May 1-3, the church and the municipal government collaborated to hold the quadracentennial activities, including with Santa Cruz's fiesta.

"We should be glad that we worked together to restore and preserve the collection of the 400 years of evangelization in Santa Cruz. It is a miracle-a lifetime work," said Fr. Tim Bantolero, chair of the quadracentennial committee. Bantolero, Cardinal Vidal, archbishop of Cebu and co-chair of the quadracentennial Mass, signed the restoration to continue the spiritual legacy of those who started the task four centuries ago.

The 400 years, an occasion planned and given the faith, and now we are restoring the faith of our people. Let us continue the legacy that they left by loving and helping one another, especially those who need us most," Vidal said.

A shop of Paete culture, arts

By Karen Lagrera
 Paete, Laguna

A FORMER PRODUCTION designer of mainstream television programs and movies has accumulated so many props for the past 17 years that his apartment could no longer accommodate them.

Now, Dela, 51, thought of opening a shop where he could display and sell some of his designs and works. But he realized that there was much more to him in selling his products.

"My mother has inspired me to come up with something that could help me share my collection with those in need of art," he said. He also has a responsibility to showcase our local businesses," said Dela, who comes from a family who has been producing "butoy" (wooden chairs) since the Japanese occupation.

In 1982, Dela got up Ang Bicutan in Hagonoy, Laguna, a 10-hectare lot, a heritage shop which mainly displays the family's wooden chairs and some old props. The center also offers art and craft classes, paper-making, chair and cabinet making and other wood crafts.

Wide network

As someone who had worked in the entertainment industry, Dela has developed many contacts who helped him handle the business. Directors and producers, though, still give him orders occasionally.

"Often, Dela is commissioned to design sets for movies, for festivals, malls, mainstream and independent films."

He stopped working as a full-time designer when he felt that it was not his thing and he wanted to do something else. His projects started to dry up, and he decided to go back to his roots and work on his own.

When he got in P15,000 for his new business, Dela said he was unsure how the shop would fare and he decided to give it a go, knowing that his passion would help him maintain it.

most, Dela depends on referrals from clients, directors and producers.

Struggle

Keeping the shop alive is a struggle, he explained. "The lack of business is a consequence of the economic crisis, but my passion has kept me going for the past 14 years."

He acknowledges that he does not expect much in terms of profit. "All we just hang on for profit, then this shop should have been closed a long time ago if I have not had it," he said.

But Dela considers the shop as a place where people can find the shop.

It has been a favorite hangout for high school and college students who want to learn about Paete's culture and arts.

"It is really amazing to know that those students who come here would come back when they need something that we offer, even if they just came without buying anything," Dela said.

Ang Bicutan is high as there has been a lot of interest in the products for the past few years despite increasing costs of raw materials.

Training ground

It has also helped groups that aim to learn the values of young artists in writing, singing, dancing and the visual arts. The Philippines and the United States have emerged from the shop's marketing and promotional efforts.

"My friends and I were thinking of how we can invite people to come into my shop, and we thought of having some projects, mainly from those who are interested in coming up with two groups of artists," Dela said.

Dela is also proud that many of his former students now have their own studios, which others have left behind for personal projects.

"My shop served as a training ground, then they learned and acquired their skills here," he said. He has been invited by the United Nations to give a talk about the cultural heritage of Paete.

Cops in Parañaque shootout face raps

Bataoil: We'll leave the matter to justice dep't

By Herman Bataoil

THE WOMAN WHO LOST HER HUSBAND AND daughter during last year's bloody shootout in Parañaque City has filed multiple murder charges against three high-ranking police officials and 26 other policemen before the Department of Justice.

In her complaint, which she filed on Tuesday, Lilian de Vera named as respondents Deputy Director General Leopoldo Bataoil, Chief Superintendent Leonardo Santiago A. and Perseus Pineda in connection with the death of her husband, Aliberto, and 19-year-old daughter, Lia Aliberto.

Bataoil was regional director of the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRO) at the time of the shootout between police operations and robbery suspects in Parañaque City on Dec. 5, 2006. The victim was caught in the shootout with Aliberto killed on the spot while Lia died in a nearby hospital.

Santiago, on the other hand, headed the Philippine National Police's Special Action Force (PNP-SAF) while Pineda was chief of the PNP's Highway Patrol Group (HPG). Both units, along with the NCRO, took part in the operation which, according to the police, was aimed at something resembling a military group.

"It is quite clear that respondents claimed the law when they attacked my husband and daughter in the most heinous, unjust and pitiful way," the Vera said in her complaint.

"While respondents are police officers and thus public officers who are supposed to protect innocent citizens from criminal elements, they went to obstruct themselves when they abused their position and brutally killed my husband and daughter by firing their weapons upon them," she added.

Her complaint also included Superintendents Carlos G. Sison, Jr., Marlon Alayon, Inspector Euliano Barasona and Lieutenant Coronado, Police Officers J. James B. Bulag, Allan T. Aoki, Dina A. Anzures, David L. Balagueron, Renato C. Gans and Marlon C. Magbana; Police Officers J. Eugene C. Torres, Javier B. Olegay, Delfino B. Lopez, Felix A. Bero, Eugene R. Paguoran and Policemen G. Jose A. and PNP staff members.

Also charged in the complaint were Insp. Florentino Guterres A. Guterres, Inspector Luciano Gallo and Insp. Men. Clara, Insp. Gerardo Bautista; Police Officers J. Jairo P. Macanaza II, and Perseus P. Pineda; Police Officers J. Gerardo D. Ramos and Euliano Barasona and PNP Asst. Insp. L. Larios.

Bataoil, meanwhile, said he was submitting himself to the justice department's pending investigation of the deaths.

Bataoil, now head of the PNP Northern Division, has Integrated Police Operations, and the police-manned no-intimidation/killings sub-unit called the Integrated Police Operations.

"We will leave the matter to the Department of Justice to decide the policemen who killed their lives against the willful 'Whay-Whay' band who they suspect will be rightfully judged," he said in a rare news story sent to reporters. <http://www.pnp.gov.ph>

LONDON—PREGNANT WOMEN who get swine flu are at a higher risk of complications than other people with the virus, a new study says.

While experts don't know if pregnant women are more susceptible to swine flu, they say once pregnant women are infected, they have a higher risk of complications.

Researchers at the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) studied the first 34 US cases, including six deaths, of swine flu in pregnant women from April to mid-June.

They concluded that pregnant women reported of having swine flu should be given flu shots as soon as possible.

The findings suggest, the study says, that pregnant women should be given flu shots as soon as possible.

also, even before they catch the diagnosis. The experts also recommended that pregnant women be among the first to get the vaccine as it is expected to be ready in the fall.

The study was published on-line on Wednesday in the medical journal, the Lancet.

Like the general population, most pregnant women who get swine flu only have mild symptoms like fever and a cough, according to the World Health Organization (WHO).

Debra Jacobson of the CDC, the study's lead researcher, said the agency didn't recommend any special procedures for pregnant women to avoid catching the virus.

But if pregnant women do get swine flu, Jacobson said doctors should be on hand, preferably within 48 hours of developing symptoms.

"The message is don't delay appropriate treatment because of your pregnancy," Jacobson said.

WHO officials have previously reported that some doctors were reluctant to give the antiviral drug Tamiflu to pregnant women. While reluctant to give Tamiflu to pregnant women was limited, Jacobson said it appeared relatively safe.

Of the six fatal cases in the latest study, Jacobson said nearly all had viral pneumonia before experiencing some respiratory problems, and none put on resistance before they died. Some had no known contact with another who was sick, Jacobson said.

Agents search Jackson doc's property

LAS VEGAS—FOR THE SECOND time in less than a week, investigators have searched the property of Michael Jackson's personal doctor as they try to find out whether he administered a powerful anesthetic to help the pop singer sleep.

Federal agents on Tuesday searched Dr. Conrad Murray's home office in Las Vegas. Last week, authorities searched his clinic and several storage units in Southern California.

Investigators are looking for evidence of whether the physician committed manslaughter, but charges against a doctor for the death of a patient are extremely rare and require an affidavit to show there was a criminal act.

Murray told investigators he administered the drug propofol to Jackson as a sleep aid, but he said he did not know how long Murray was out of the room.

The official said investigators were working under the theory that propofol caused Jackson's heart to stop. The official said that should show other killed, Jackson is expected to testify at the trial.

Authorities have characterized Murray as the target of the investigation, but have dropped charges of killing him a suspect.

Propofol typically is used to render patients unconscious for surgery. It can depress breathing and lower heart rate and blood pressure.

Some use of propofol is usually without a doctor, and if Murray left Jackson's side, he would have violated guidelines for the use of the drug drawn up by the American Society of Anesthesiologists.

PUBLIC HEALTH ADVISORY

28 July 2009

DOH-BFAD ADVISORY No. 2009-007

Subject: Counterfeit flu vaccines

Recent news reports have reached the Bureau of Food and Drugs (BFAD) that a fake/counterfeit flu vaccine, imitating or without any authority using the name Vaxigrip, is being unlawfully manufactured, distributed and sold by some unscrupulous persons gravely misrepresenting the consuming public that it contains the ingredients it purports to possess and claiming that it is BFAD registered. Reports have it that this flu vaccine purportedly contains only distilled water.

In view of these reports, the BFAD strongly warns all drugstore owners and/or their pharmacists to exercise extra diligence in buying this vaccine and any other drugs and medicines. They should buy only from sources duly licensed by BFAD and to always demand sales invoices or receipts from their sources indicating therein the name of the drugs and medicines purchased and their respective lot numbers and expiry dates. The refusal of the source to issue and/or indicate the aforementioned information should give rise to suspicion and must be reported immediately to BFAD.

It must be stressed that the manufacture, importation, distribution or sale of counterfeit flu vaccines and any other drugs and medicines shall be punishable under Republic Act No. 3720, as amended, otherwise known as the Foods, Drugs, Devices and Cosmetics Act, Republic Act No. 7394 or the Consumer Act of the Philippines, and Republic Act No. 8203 or the Special Law on Counterfeit Drugs. Perpetrators shall be criminally prosecuted and sanctioned under the law prescribing the highest penalty.

Finally, all consumers are advised to purchase this vaccine and other drugs and medicines only at outlets duly licensed by BFAD and to demand receipts as well.

For information and immediate action on counterfeit drugs, please contact BFAD at the following numbers: 809-4390 local 1131 (Regulation Division 1).

Pag-ibig City to rise in Tacloban City

By Winston Calawan
Nagpartinon

TACLOBAN CITY—A LOCAL DEVELOPER will soon see its P300-million subdivision project here, which will be financed by the Home Development Mutual Fund (Pag-ibig).

Horacio B. Moroco, Pag-ibig regional manager for Eastern Visayas, said recently that the project, which would be called Pag-ibig City, would be the third to be developed by President Compostela using Pag-ibig funds.

Located in Barangay Supuran, about 12 km from the Tacloban city proper, Pag-ibig City would have 345 housing units.

Moroco said that Pag-ibig Fund has set aside P300 million for the region this year for local under-development or infrastructure development projects.

This is double the P150 million that the Pag-ibig allocated last year for subdivision development in the region.

Despite Villaluna, chief of the housing loan division of Pag-ibig in Eastern Visayas, said he expected the developer to finish about 80 percent of the housing units by the end of this year.

Aside from the President Compostela projects, Pag-ibig also provided funding for ongoing subdivision projects, such as the P24 subdivision and the Cordillera Executive Heights in Cagayan, Samar, and the Regency Heights and Villa Rica subdivisions in Tacloban City.

Villaluna said some local government units have also realized the relevance of the Pag-ibig Development Loans.

Projects include the First Baybay Housing Project in Baybay, Samar, and the subdivision projects of the provincial government in Cebu, Northern Samar.

Cordillera finishes last in '08 economic output

By Winston Calawan
Nagpartinon

BAOING CITY—THE CORDILLERA ended last year at the bottom of the list of regional economic performance and government economists are trying to figure out why.

Data from the National Statistical Commission Board (NSCB) showed a sharp slowdown in the growth of the region's 2008 gross regional domestic product in 1.8 percent, from 7.3 percent in 2007.

Sam Aquino, Cordillera director of the National Economic and Development Authority, attributed the lower growth to the decline in firms revenues, as well as the adverse effects of the US recession on regional manufacturing exports like "Stone Industries Philippines Inc. (STPI) in Baguio City.

"The Cordillera relies heavily on profits generated by the Impos-Itay limestone zone (ICIZ) where Tapo operates, said NSCB Cordillera director Benjamin Navarro, "but we're not sure to keep a close watch on ICIZ2 this year" to see how the region will fare.

The NSCB estimate registered more than 50 percent of the region's total manufacturing output. The industry sector, meanwhile, accounts for 42.7 percent of the

Slowdown linked to drop in agri, industry

Cordillera's revenues, Navarro said.

The Cordillera groups Abra, Benguet, Kalinga, Apayao, Ifugao and Mt. Province.

But he acknowledged that the region also suffered from a drop in agriculture growth from 19.5 percent in 2007 to just 2.3 percent last year, which slowed exports.

High value commodities, identified with the region, such as turmeric and coffee, were among the region's recent production last year, he said.

He added that he would need to consult officials of the Department of Agriculture to understand why Cordillera's commodities failed the regional economy.

The slowdown was across other industries this year, besides Cordillera's.

The backbone of the Cordillera sector (steeped in the value of commodities) produced that year in 2008.

NSCB recently said the value of this sector's production more than dropped by 3.8 percent in 2007, and also further by 17.7 percent last year.

Tarlac, which supports the economy of many Cordillera towns, grew last year by 6.9 percent, a decline from the 12.3 percent recorded in 2007.

Navarro said the region's economy has always been unpredictable because of its erratic growth pattern over the last 19 years.

Entrepreneur and Marikina, who participated in a July 12 forum on the growth of the Cordillera, said the industry of the Cordillera, and similar regions.

Guioy Cruz, a UP economics professor, said "economic growth in the Cordillera is a drive of agglomeration for an already small" economy of the Cordillera.

Looking at a paper she and economist Bernardino Lopez Jr. wrote, Cruz said the region's average GDP had been hovering at 2.3 percent, except for 2006 and 2007 when momentum recorded a 7.4 percent growth.

The improved GDP of 2007, Cruz said, "was not a balanced growth" as investments were concentrated in Baguio City with just a small portion going to other Cordillera provinces.

So easy-to-bake Japanese choco bread

© CHOCO Choco

Illustration by JESSICA LUTHER

By Virginia Rags-Rays

AN EASY, EVERYDAY BREAD taking could yield this delicious Japanese bread for the family.

There's nothing more stimulating than doing your own dough, mixing and kneading it in a mix, that's comforting, seeing it go, adding your favorite sweetener filling, and watching the bread's aromatic goodness.

Choco Bread is a delightful Japanese bread using soft chocolate powder (filling), kneaded with meticulously sugar on top.

"It's a very satisfying chocolate snack," says Greg A. Gabon, researcher and development manager at Davao City, Mindanao, of this, Rags-Rays said "Taste Me This."

OK. "To one of the favorites in the mix, it has a firm chocolate crust and the chocolate filling on the top of your favorite chocolate spread. You can do the kneading in a bread machine or by hand."

To make a chocolate crust, crush about 45 pieces (150 g) of chocolate (1000 to 1000) into a bowl. Use a food processor or blender to make a crust. Add 1/2 cup (118 g) butter or margarine and mix all.

If you want to make your own chocolate ganache instead of using a chocolate spread, you can use 1/2 cup (118 g) brown sugar (chocolate to bring bowl) and mix. In case you combine 2 c of heavy cream or all purpose cream, 2 tsp glucose, and 1 tsp in a saucepan to PREHEAT oven at 180°C. Grease or coat all dry ingredients in large mixing bowl. Add 1/2 cup yeast. Mix all. Pour water gradually and mix into the dry ingredients.

FLAT the dough and put chocolate spread/ganache at the center of the dough.

MIX until a soft dough is formed. Add kneading butter. Transfer mixture to work surface and knead dough until gluten is formed (smoothness). Form dough into a ball.

FLAT dough into a square and put dough into desired portion. Form into ball. Rest for 15 minutes.

GATHER edges of the dough toward the center and pinch the edges within and. Round the dough until uniform in color (smoothness). In case, do you can place dough in water.

become one of the most popular
Pizza Hut pizzas, following their world famous Pan-Pizza.

"The Viva Lasagna is definitely a good value for money. In one product, customers can already enjoy two great tasting favorites," said Capen.

Viva Lasagna Meat Lovers Pizza is priced at only P218 for the 10-inch pizza and P399 for the 14-inch pizza.

In the Philippines, Pizza Hut was established in 1985. With 151 stores, it is now the country's most popular pizza chain serving Metro
Manila and branches in Visayas and Mindanao with its drive-in restaurants, take-out and delivery units.
